

Best K-Pop Collaborations of 2025

Genius Korea | Published 2025

1. "Born Again" by LISA ft. Doja Cat & RAYE

"Born Again" brings together LISA, RAYE, and Doja Cat in a compelling collaboration that is a celebration of feminine power and cultural fusion, successfully keeping each artist true to herself. The track takes heartbreak and flips it into something powerful.

Each verse shows what their former lovers missed by leaving. LISA brings commanding energy, RAYE adds soulful depth, and Doja Cat delivers bold creativity. The production blends pop, hip-hop, and R&B; without forcing anything. What makes this collaboration stand out is how it celebrates feminine power without being explicit. The three artists represent different cultures and backgrounds, creating something that speaks to people who navigate multiple identities.

The song resonates because it feels real. These aren't just three stars on the same track. They're three women telling a story about rising above loss and finding strength in who they are. "Born Again" works because it turns vulnerability into confidence naturally.
