Anxiety: The Short Film

INT. Dev's House—Day

Dev wakes up in the morning, turns off his alarm, sits up.

Anxiety (V.O.)

It's already 9? You woke up late again. You have a lot on your agenda today. Weren't you saying you were going to go to the gym today AND clean the house AND work an event later?

Dev

I know but I was tired. I needed rest.

Dev walks out to the kitchen, tired and stressed and a little dejected. He starts putting away dishes and doing other chores. His anxiety ceaselessly nags.

Anxiety (V.O.)

That's fine but you should have thought about that before you went to sleep late last night. It's almost like you don't think about consequences or something. I thought you were grinding.

Dev

It'll be fine. It's still early in the day. Can you let me just give myself grace? I'm not a damn robot.

Anxiety (V.O.)

I'm here to help you but you don't even want to seem to help yourself.

Dev starts to prepare the guarana while Anxiety's voice continues to drone on. He measures out the powder in the scoop and sets down his juice right next to it.

Anxiety (V.O.)

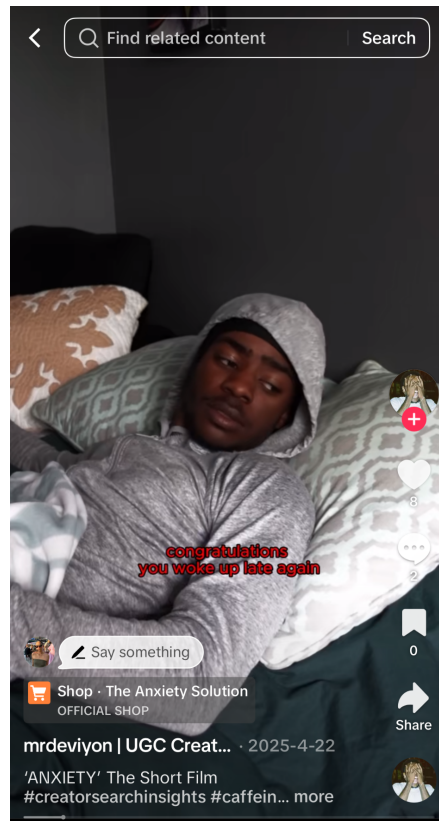

Tell me your 3 year plan. Your 10 year plan. Hell, do you even have a retirement plan? Actually, nevermind, I've seen your bank account and you definitely do not have a retirement plan. This time is crucial for your future.

How do you expect to succeed if you're not cherishing every minute you have in the day? You're wasting—

Dev drinks the guarana. He becomes noticeably clear-minded. Anxiety quiets. We see Dev go through a whole day motivated and productive. Gym. Work. Clean.

Narrator (V.O.)

A GUARANA A DAY KEEPS THE ANXIETY AWAY. Discount offer valid for a limited time only. Not recommended for pets, children, or anyone trying to chill. Consult your doctor if you like interrupted sleep, the return of your parent's nagging as the voice of your anxiety or an all-consuming coffee crash. Side effects include becoming an athlete or a high-performing citizen. Drink responsibly.
